Start Their First Year Right

It's time to schedule your baby's dental exam. Oral wellness is one of the foundations for overall health. When our mouths, gums, or teeth aren't healthy, our bodies may be more susceptible to other problems—and that includes baby teeth! Tooth decay is the single-most common chronic infectious disease that affects children in the United States. The littlest smiles need the most care. So if your baby has reached their first birthday, it's time to meet the dentist!

Healthy Smile, Happy Life

LifeSmile can help you prevent disease and keep you on the path toward a healthier, happier life for you and your baby. Take advantage of numerous free resources for improving your oral health at oralhealth.deltadental.com.

Diabetes

HEALTHY SMILES FOR PEOPLE WITH DIABETES

If you have diabetes, it's important to take good care of your teeth and gums. Why? Gum disease can make it harder to control your diabetes. And if you don't have diabetes, good dental care can lower your chances of developing periodontal (gum) diseases.

FOLLOW THE FLOSS TO A HEALTHIER SMILE

Nobody wants to lose a tooth, but gum disease—which causes tooth loss—can sneak up on you. To get rid of the bacteria that causes gum disease you have to get rid of all the plaque. Flossing at least once a day helps clean plaque from hard-to-reach places between teeth and under the gum line—lowering your risk of cavities and helping to prevent gum disease.

Introducing the LifeSmile Employee Oral Wellness Program

oralhealth.deltadental.com

It's a simple idea: if your smile is healthy, your life can be happy. Oral health is part of overall health, and the foundation for a healthy and active lifestyle. Because oral health directly affects overall wellness, employees who have poor dental health may be more susceptible to other serious conditions. LifeSmile from Delta Dental helps your employees focus on their oral health and well-being with tools, tips and touch points for improving and maintaining good dental health.

Employers offer a healthier benefits package that may lead to healthier, more productive employees who spend less time away from work with dental-related illnesses.

Employees get the tools they need to live healthier, more productive lives—all thanks to the value-added, health-building benefits provided by their employer.

Delta Dental's LifeSmile program offers employers a wide range of oral wellness options. The LifeSmile toolkit includes everything from basic education materials to a comprehensive data-driven health management approach that helps employees maintain good oral health and potentially avoid serious medical complications. LifeSmile keeps your employees moving forward toward better overall health and may lower medical costs through improved periodontal health.

LifeSmile can help you target specific behaviors, groups or individuals to create more opportunities for better health and potential savings. And this programmatic material can easily be incorporated into your company's existing wellness program and customized to your goals.

LifeSmile brings together an entire menu of educational program components that can be organized to serve your goals. And you'll not only receive the tools to do the job, but also receive the reporting needed to measure progress and guide performance with recommended next steps.

Is Your Healthy Smile at Risk?

Oral health is a foundation for overall wellness. By knowing your risks for oral diseases and infections, you can better control the factors that lead to future problems. Here are some factors that increase your risk of mouth infections, dental disease and even oral cancer.

Are You at Risk?

- Do you smoke? Smokers are four times as likely as nonsmokers to develop periodontal (gum) disease.
- Do you use smokeless tobacco? Using tobacco in any form increases the risk of mouth and throat cancer.
- Do you have more than two drinks a day or often have five or more drinks at a sitting? Excessive alcohol consumption can increase your risk of oral cancer.
- Going through hormonal changes? Pregnancy and menopause can cause inflamed gums.
- Have diabetes? People with this condition are at higher risk for gum infections.

What's your score? If you're concerned about your risks, or if you want to learn more about preventing oral disease, visit oralhealth.deltadental.com to take a quick risk assessment and find out how healthy your smile really is.

Healthy Smile, Happy Life.

Oral health is part of overall health, and the foundation for a healthy and active lifestyle. When our mouths, gums or teeth aren't healthy, our bodies may be more susceptible to other serious conditions. It's a simple truth: Healthy smile, happy life.

Is Your Overall Health at Risk?

- Almost 40% of American adults will experience moderate to severe periodontal (gum) disease.*
- Gum disease is caused by bacteria that form plaque on your teeth.
- Left untreated, these bacteria can infect the tissues surrounding and supporting your teeth.
- Gum disease has been associated with diabetes, heart disease, stroke and other health problems.

Keeping your smile healthy is an important step in keeping your body healthy. For tips, tools and resources to help you improve and maintain your oral wellness and overall health throughout the year, make sure to bookmark oralhealth.deltadental.com.

Integration Flyer

LifeSmile from Delta Dental can help employees stay on the path toward better overall health and higher productivity, while helping target specific behaviors, groups or individuals to create more opportunities for potential savings.

A special integration flyer describes in detail how LifeSmile programmatic material can be incorporated into any company's existing wellness program with ease, customized to their goals.

Healthy Smiles, Happy Employees

How to Integrate LifeSmile into Your Existing Employee Wellness Program

LifeSmile from Delta Dental can help your employees stay on the path toward better overall health and higher productivity, while helping you target specific behaviors, groups, and individuals to create more opportunities for potential savings.

LifeSmile programmatic material can be incorporated into your company's existing wellness program and customized to your goals:

- If your workplace offers weekly health challenges, incorporate a "2 minute/2 times a day" brushing challenge one week.
- Share sugar-free recipes on company intranet or social media accounts.
- Provide rewards for a dental wellness quiz contest at your next staff meeting or wellness event.
- Employee health fairs are a great time to encourage employees to take the online dental risk assessment.
- Distribute dentist reminders to employees whose babies are celebrating their first birthdays.
- Encourage employees to share success stories of reaching oral health goals on your intranet or social media.
- Provide LifeSmile smoking cessation materials where remaining smokers congregate.
- Have a healthy smile "selfie" contest where employees guess which smile belongs to whom.
- Provide mouthguard educational materials to staff at sports day events and at the beginning of each school year.
